ADMIRALTY LAW.

Admiralty suits, their nature; cases of admiralty and maritime jurisdiction are of the following nature, to-wit: Suits by seamen for wages; by pilots for pilotage services; by material men for material and supplies furnished to steamers and vessels in foreign ports; suits on marine policles of insurance, and on marine contracts of affreightment; suits by salvor for salvage services; suits to recover loan on bottom-ny and respondentia bonds; suits to obtain a general average; suits for marine torts, such as collisions between vessels, and assaults committed on high seas or navigable waters, either upon seamen or passengers. Utah has arrived and is set for Oct. 12. The admiralty is the law given above. What puzzles the government legal lights more than anything else is what the law above could have to do with a Ship ahoy!

Lucian Smyth, deputy United States

Lucian Smyth, deputy United States marshal is practising the hormpipe out in the hall. He is the one that precipitated all the trouble; he is the man who brought up the gale. It all came about in this manner:

Deputy Marshal Smyth heard that an Iowa canning concern was shipping shortweight stuff to Utth. An investigation followed. It resulted in the discovery that the Fred J. Kiesel company of Ogden had received 1,340 shortweight cases of corn from the Audubon Canning company of Audubon, Iowa.

ORDER AND DISORDER

ORDER AND DISORDER.

There was left in the storehouse of the Kiesel company, 960 cases of this corn, when the deputy marshal made his search so he confiscated them and now holds them under custody. Here's where the wild waves came up. The department notified the courts to proceed under the admiralty form of proceed under the admiralty form of proceedure, and not a federal lawyer here possesses a pair of hip boots!

There was consternation and a search There was consternation and a search through the statutes for enlightenment. What is contained in the box at the head of this column was the sum and substance of the searcher's fruits.

ATTACKS BUSY. The dignified district attorney re-fused to talk about the case but he was busy this morning studying a map of "streams and bodies of water in Utah." An associate was nibbling on rock salt. Clerk Letcher was reading Jack Lon-don's story of "My Trip in the Snark." United States Marshal Spry is trim-ming his sails. He denied being at sea. CALM ENCOUNTERED. CALM ENCOUNTERED.

The only federal attache who would not be upset by the admiralty case is J. Greenwald. This is natural for Mr. Greenwald is surveyor of the port; this makes him a nautical character. He could not be located, but had he been, he might have invited the reporter to visit his cabin. The situation would have then been explained fully. There is some doubt in the reporter's mind as to just what Mr. Greenewald would have said, but notes jotted down during the conversation might have the dialogue in this shape:

"You see, my boy, it is like this: this corn came aft full of scruppers..."

"What are scruppers?"

"What are scruppers?"
"Iowa fleas—so the whole bulwarks, fore and aft, had to be subjected to a howsprit and hence the jib boom."

The situation is so badly upset that everybody is more or less on their beam ends. Even the janitor of the Federal building, when asked what time, he had fired the furnazes this morning, answered innocently, "Maritime." Oh, mercy! Man overboard!

UNTRIMMED TRUTH.

The whole untrimmed truth of th The whole untrimmed truth of the matter is that the Kiesel company will be brought into court Oct. 12 to be tried upon charges of purchasing shortweight merchandise. And the case is to be heard in the form prescribed for admiralty cases whatever it is, that point being in darkness at this time. The cases were labled "24 cans; total weight 52 pounds," but the cases averaged only 42 nounds, making the twoweight 52 pounds," but the cases averaged only 42 pounds, making the two-pound cans in the neighborhood of a half pound short. While the Kiesel company is admitted the innocent purchaser, the hearing will be directed against it. Later, action against the Lowa cannery is certain.

An entirely new puzzler arises as to what charge could be laid against the corn were the cans to explode while in charge of the marshal's office. "An in charge of the marshal's office. "An attempt against government employes' lives;" "Trying to wreck a government building," and if the explosion occurs in court, "Contempt" might be the ones from which a selection would be made. The government can do three things with the corn. They are: destroy, sell or relabel and permit to be sold.

The final straw comes from Mr. Smyth. "I got bunnions tracing down that corn."

Leland K. Simon Passes Away at State Mental Hospital.

A death that is much regretted, es-A death that is much regretted, especially among students of the high school, was that of Leland K. Simons, formerly of Payson, but later a resident of this city. He died suddenly and very unexpectedly at the state mental hospital, Provo, yesterday morning, having been removed to that institution some weeks ago.

In April, 1907, the boy was struck on the head by a heavy hammer, during a track meet practise at the high school. He was a bystander, and the hammer slipped from the hand of the thrower. For a long time he was in a precarlous condtion, but subsequently recovered sufficiently to return to school and afterwards lie went to work. At times,

The expected improvement did not come, and he was taken to the institution first mentioned. Only at times was the boy's unbalanced mind noticeable. During frequent rational spells he wrote beautiful letters to his parents, consoling them and saying that he would soon be all right and would be with them at home. Yesterday morning he seemed as well as usual, ate a hearty breakfast, but an hour later was found gead in his room. The functal will be held at Payson.

This is the biggest sidewalk contract ever awarded in the history of the city.

POLITICAL POINTERS DEMOCRATS MAY ASSEMBLE AGAIN

Informally Discuss New Leader For State Ticket to Replace Jesse Knight.

COMMITTEE NOT ANXIOUS.

is Willing to Allow the Candidate The Benefit of Nomination by A Convention.

The Democratic state convention may be reassembled to choose a successor to Uncle Jesse Knight at the head of the ticket, provided his refusal to run remains as positive as it now seems. Informal discussion among leading Democrats today develops an opinion that most of them favor of reconvening the convention in preference to asking anyone to run upon appointment by the state committee, although this committee has the power to ap-point a candidate to fill any vacanpoint a candidate to fill any vacancy.

Judge O. W. Powers today when asked if he favored filling the vacancy by reconvening the convention said: "Uncle Jesse has only talked to the newspapers so far. We have no declination from him that closes the matter, and nothing will be done by the party until some time has elapsed."

The names of likely candidates for the position are being much discussed today, looking forward to the contingency that the state committee must finally give up hope for a change of mind on the part of Uncle Jesse.

Joseph Peery of Ogden is frequently mentioned for the place, and has geographical points in his favor, as Weber county so far has no representation on the ticket. Harden Bennion, formerly state senator, is also mentioned. Bennion was a candidate for secretary of state, and his defeat by E. R. Owen of Cache leaves the southeast without a special "favorite son" on the ticket. From Salt Lake John Dern's name is frequently brought up, while many are wondering whether J. Will Knight could be induced to take the nomination, and thus keep it in the Knight family. J. Will Knight has been intition, and thus keep it in the Knight family. J. Will Knight has been inti-mate with his father in the development of his enterprises and is manager of many of them.

How the matter will finally adjust itself it is too early yet to state. The state committee, at its meeting yesterday, adjourned until Oct. 2, and no action will be taken, it is thought, in the meantime.

ONE ON GUTCH.

Puts it up For Raffle.

George M. Gutch, clerk of Judge Dichl's court, received a shock this merning from which he will not soon recover. Mr. Gutch had occasion to go over some records in the desk sergeant's office, and while engaged in that occupation Patrol Driver Moore did the "light fingered" act and cleverly "lifted" the clerk's valuable and handsome gold watch and fob.

Mr. Gutch did not miss the time piece for about an hour and when he discovered that the watch had disappeared he began to do some tall thinking. He tried to remember where he had been, who he had left the watch home. His face turned all the colors of a rainbow and he was on the verge of collapse morning from which he will not soon and he was on the verge of collapse when he happened to think he had been in the desk sergeant's office and know-ing the penchant for joking the police-men have, he rushed frantically down

Two cities want Salt Lake to work or their interests at the National Ir-

"We shall answer that between two friendly cities we cannot take sides," declared Fisher Harris for the Commercial club today.

"There is an impression," he continued, "that this club or the Utah delegation are pledged to Washington, D. C. That is not the case. A committee was appointed from many states on which one Utah man happened to be appointed. This committee reported favorably to Washington, but that in no way affects the Utah delegation, or any state delegation. The only instructions to the delegates I favor is that they shall listen to the arguments presented at the congress and pledge themselves to the town they like best"

AMUSEMENTS.

Theater—The evening of November 14th last, will always be remembered by our theater goers as a red letter night. The occasion was the first presentation here of Ned Royle's "Squaw Man," the speech between the acts by Mr. Royle himself, and the appearance of Wilspeech between the acts by Mr. Royle himself, and the appearance of William Faversham in the central role. The deep impression that event left was well evidenced last night when, in spite of the downpour of rain, a big and brilliant audience came out to welcome the play back again, and incidentally to extend greetings to an old favorite, Dustin Farnum, so well remembered for his work in "Arizona" and "The Virginian."

Mr. Royle's beautiful play, which membered for his work in Arthura and "The Virginian."

Mr. Royle's beautiful play, which since its Salt Lake production, has been the sensation of the season in London, has been fully described by the "News," and it only needs to be added that its strength, tenderness, and beauty, impress as strongly as ever, and still entitle it to the name of the greatest American play of recent years. As long as the Lieblers keep the production up to the present standard (and they and Mr. Royle are too keen to lower it in the least) there is no reason why managers and author should not go on drawing their dividends indefinitely.

why managers and author should not go on drawing their dividends indefinitely.

The cast in the present company is thoroughly capable. There may be two or three spots in which the originals are hardly equaled, but there are several others in which they are excelled, and the effect of the whole picture is as charming and fascinating as it ever was. Mr. Farnum gave a thoroughly artistic and most enjoyable rendition of the title role. The sole respect in which he does not measure up with Faversham, is in the fact of his nationality, Faversham being a Britisher born, and as ultra English in his style, as Mr. Faversham is ultra American in his. In the first act, therefore, laid in England, Faversham was more thoroughly "to the manner born," but in the other three, Farnum was the cowboy to the life. It should be remembered also, that this is his third week in the role, whereas Faversham had played it three years. Mr. Farnum had some tempestuous recalls, after one of which he essayed a brief speech. He stated that his prolonged absence from the west had been due to the fact that he had been hunting for a piece good enough to bring west of the Mississippi, but had not found it, so he had taken up with another play, which Salt Landhad already seen, but the play was so good, he added, that he did not feel that he needed any excuse, though the audience might wonder at his "nerve" in following in the footsteps of his predecessor. The speech was as heartily applauded as his acting.

"Big Bill" is still in the hands of George Deyo, who still makes it the second part of the piece, and a fine creation throughout. The Indian of Mr. Lewis was also most artistic, and the Cash Hawkins of Mr. Shaw was so good as to call to mind the Trampas of Campeau, and Mr. Shaw would hardly ask for higher praise. Miss Conwell made a handsome Diana, and Miss Fisher a pretty picture as the Indian maid, though hardly investing it with the intensity that her predecessor did. WEATHER REPORT

Summer is at an end. The status of the thermometer showed this to be the case this morning, with a maximum of 55 degrees for yesterday, and 40 degrees for this morning's record. The rain of the recent storm amounted to 1.80 inch, and on the higher mountains fell in form of snow. So the peaks look quite winterish this morning. There has been a marked fall of temperature all over the country, as the number of minus signs on the weather map indicate; but while steady warm has gone, the indications are that there will be a stretch of mild fall weather for the next week.

Late this afternoon Judge Morse granted a divorce to Sarah Jane Potter, awarding her the custody of two minor children. She asked for no alimony, but was content to be free, to assume her maiden name, Griffiths, even though she had to work hard for the support of herself and children.
